

7521676766.txt

The internet is, at the least, the equivalent of the phone service of previous generations. Any double talk claiming that ISPs are not providing a utility is disingenuous as they have, in essence the functional counterparts equivalent to the infrastructure of the telephone system before it. The internet is the modern and more powerful utility and should be held to the same standard of neutrality as any other utility.