Net neutrality must be maintained if the internet is not to become another corporately-controlled media venue with service provided based upon offerings of money and compliance with parochial corporate policy. It is essential that the FCC look down the road at the logical progression and evolution of the now-proposed rules bearing in mind the degree of corporate influence now exerted upon very many aspects of America's public life, and the likelihood that inexorable corporate influence could ultimately come to shape internet access, usage, innovation, and wider policy to a degree not in the interest of the American people or the US government. You have an absolute obligation to avoid the obvious fallacy that "what is good for business is good for America," and you know it. Your children and grandchildren are relying on your integrity -- man up and do the right thing for our nation.
