If an image of someone lazy pops into your head while thinking of "a person that loves the internet," then forget that. The internet is home to a huge group of diverse people all across the globe, and we live and love together in this peculiar world. Turning the internet into some communist-Russia type of place is no way to lead a country, and if you're thinking it is, then get out of America. Let us all be free and equal, so that way you guys don't have to deal with an incoming revolution. That'd be annoying wouldn't it? Sending down policemen to stop angry protesters and rioters would be annoying wouldn't it? Having to contact other countries and territories because you're actions have affected their country without their consent would be annoying wouldn't it? There's no need to give more money to these companies, they already have everything in the world they want. Be the dominant one here. Speak up for the people and tell companies like Time Warner Cable and Comcast that the people aren't having any of that. If you're thinking, "Oh what does a loser on the internet think he can talk to me like this," just realize that you're in charge of a country where everyone is loved equally, and no matter who you are or where you're from, you can be the best you can be. I hope my words reach thousands upon millions of men, women, and little children, wanting a land where we can roam free like we have before. But it's been taken away by the introduction of greed. Greed has poisoned mankind, and if you change your ways, you can make this world a better place. Sincerely, a worried citizen.
