Without net neutrality, I would be unable to pursue my dreams of being a content creator. My work would not be able to reach any audience, as I would not be able to keep up with corporations who could pay for faster services. I dream of creating several web series and movies, and perhaps even publish my own books. I can't do that if there is no one to pay for these things, and there won't be anyone if I can't get any exposure. By taking away net neutrality, you are eliminating any chance for new art to be created, seen and enjoyed.

This is an important issue to me, as a new voter, and it's something that I stand firmly behind. As a citizen of this country, I do not wish to see the kind of egregious behavior that Internet service providers are displaying be rewarded. I wish to be treated just the same as others, and to be given the chance to work hard and be successful in my goals. That is what this country is supposed to be about.

Net neutrality is the First Amendment of the Internet, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data equally. As an Internet user, net neutrality is vitally important to me. The FCC should use its Title II authority to protect it.

Most Americans have only one choice for truly high speed Internet: their local cable company. This is a political failure, and it is an embarrassment. America deserves competition and choice.

Without net neutrality, a bad situation gets even worse. These ISPs will now be able to manipulate our Internet experience by speeding up some services and slowing down others. That kills choice, diversity, and quality.

It also causes tremendous economic harm. If ISPs can speed up favored services and slow others, new businesses will no longer be able to rely on a level playing field. When ISPs can slow your site and destroy your business at will, how can any startup attract investors?

My friends, family, and I use the Internet for conversation and fun, but also for work and business. When you let ISPs mess with our Internet experience, you are attacking our social lives, our entertainment, and our economic well being. We won't stand for it.

ISPs are opposing Title II so that they can destroy the FCC's net neutrality rules in court. This is the same trick they pulled last time. Please, let's not be fooled again. Title II is the strong, legally sound way to enforce net neutrality. Use it.

As a new voter, I am concerned with how
