

Comcast already effectively has a monopoly, which is why their prices are high and their quality of service is low. They are no longer in a situation where they need to compete with other companies, so they refuse to upgrade their cables to modern cables, and instead use the fact that no one else can compete to continue to make money off of old, slow, and unreliable cables. Allowing them to merge with Time Warner would only compound the problem, as this would give them a firmer hold over the market, and it will be even longer before anyone will ever be able to compete with them to force innovation. Please do not support the merger between these two behemoth companies.
