

7521729709.txt

I thought that anti trust laws kept things like this from happening. Cable company mergers reduce competition, programming, freedom and raise consumer prices. Does anybody care anymore or do profits outweigh the common good? If the government (Congress and the FCC) control the airwaves then why are consumers subject to only being able to view programming that some company wants us to get (and pay for)? Either stop merging C companies or allow us to watch (and PAY) for what we want.