We live in an area that we suppose is rated "rural". We are limited to the more up-to-date communications. In our case we must relay on Alltel (Windstream), for telephone and WIFI. AT&T is not available to us. DISH HD is available, however, we go through Windstream for the billing of this service. COMCAST as available to us, but they have the "WORST" Customer Service rating in the nation. All this being said, do you think, in our life time, we will see a "more open" market for services without discrimination for being classified "rural"?

Thanks.
