

7521734543.txt

The world is already favours companies over consumers far too much. I do not think a company should have the right to be able to favour one set of voices over another based on arbitrary and possibly discriminatory reasons. Consider that ending net neutrality could feasibly allow a net provider to discriminate against gays or certain religious or political groups over others if this is allowed.