Sagebrush Cellular, Inc., Nemont Communications, Inc., and Triangle Communication System, Inc. (the "Companies") hereby supplement their August 10, 2012 joint Request for Waiver in response to a telephone inquiry from the Commission's staff regarding the Companies

From 2011 to 2013, ACG was the predominate handset supplier to the Companies. CMAS capability supported in a CDMA device was regularly discussed during weekly ACG product planning conference calls. ACG's product team updated the buying consortium's members regularly regarding the shortage of CDMA + CMAS functionality within the ACG product lineup. During these weekly discussions ACG would present its "future device roadmap" to inform the participants about handset availability.

It was not until on or about March 5, 2012 that ACG was able to obtain a CMAS capable handset for distribution to the buying consortium. Shortly thereafter the Companies placed an order for a test handset, the LG AS695 Optimus, and began system compatibility testing in March 2012. Testing was completed in mid-July 2012 and an order for the handsets was placed on August 8, 2012. CMAS compliant handsets were available for retail distribution by September 1, 2012.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing statements are true to the best of my knowledge, information, and belief.
