

7521746204.txt

Cable companies have always been a monopoly ever since the first Bell stations were built. On one hand you have cable companies who stay out of each others way like common street gangs, and on the other hand you have citizens who use the internet for work, relaxation, and support.