

7521749821.txt

As a full-time college student working 3 jobs who is dependent on a reliable and affordable internet connection, I am adamant that net neutrality remain in place and for internet access to be treated as a public commodity. A high-speed internet connection powers both my productivity and potential for professional growth, and I know that I am not alone in my dependency. Please consider the broad-reaching effects and consequences of this action.