

7521752040.txt

I can't imagine this action would even come into consideration if it weren't for the cable companies lobbying to make more profit over the Internet access they provide. In a country known for the small business owners, even though those small business sometimes get crushed by big business like Walmart, we still have hope that any one person can rise from nothing to captains of industry. We need that and if Internet loses that ability it will be a sad day for competition to those big business out there. I still dream of a day that someone makes something that overtakes Facebook and that cannot happen if net neutrality doesn't exist!