Please consider making the inclusion of rural tv a condition of the merger between Direct TV and AT&T. Growing up in a rural area this type of information was valuable and common. Upon my graduation from college, my career choice took me to a major metropolitan area. The information provided by stations such as RFD TV are nonexistent. These types of stations not only allow me to gain knowledge in what is going on in the agriculture world today but it allows me to introduce my children to this way of life. Too many of our youth today think food comes from a fast food restaurant or the grocery store. It doesn't it comes from the farmers and ranchers of this country. The old saying is that if you eat you are involved in agriculture is so true.

Thank you for considering making these types of programs a condition of merger.
