

7521759576.txt

I think it is very clear from the previous few thousand comments how the American public feels about this issue. We want net neutrality. We want equal access for all.

You are now in a position to either fulfill the measure of trust you have been granted or to bend to the demands of lobbyists and allow consumers to be further victimized by an oligopoly that has provided us with some of the highest Internet costs in the world, been rated at the bottom of the heap in customer service of any industry, and kept the nation behind in Internet access speeds and availability. Do we reward them with further control of our information highways? No.

Please make the right decision. Defend net neutrality.