I believe that bringing an end to the current legislation that governs our web-space will be the most detrimental act in American history. The ability for a start up company to challenge an established corporation is the truest example of capitalism in this country. But instead I am spending my time here today to try and bring about the swift end of ludicrous legislation is a testament to the direction the United States of America is headed. Again the blatant favoritism of corporate America over We the People of this beautiful "Land of Opportunity", yet here we seek to eliminate the opportunity of every American with a dream to effect our sphere of webspace and maybe others. The fact that a man who used to lead the lobbying arm of the telecommunications branch of our economy is ridiculous, and the fact that he can bring about such destructive legislature in such a short amount of time should be cause for investigation. So I plead to the FCC, to the corporations who encourage ambition and competition, if you move forward with any proposal to end or amend the regulations of our web-space then you will be crippling our recovering economy and further subjugating us to foreign influence and investment.
