

7521760531.txt

The US is already burdened with some of the most expensive internet service in the first world - paying significantly more than other countries for a given speed. Further reduction in competition will only worsen this situation and further hinder the American economy. An economy that is relying more and more heavily on internet access.