My wife and I have Dish Cable Company because we have no problem with the RFD stations. We changed from Comcast for that reason. We are retired, but lived on a farm earlier in our lives and still have an interest in farming. All people should care where their food comes from, as well as the problems that face the farmers. There are some good programs on the "urban companies" and we enjoy them too, but why do we have to choose a certain cable company to get them all. As big as the cable companies are, they should be able to handle all stations.
