America is a land of many cultures, lifestyles, languages and industry. To separate urban from rural is to divide what makes America great. The steel industry is vital to growth and building. The rural industry, farming and ranching, is vital to feeding American people and people in many other countries. It is vital to America, her people, our industries, that we do not separate programming. The rural channel contains agriculture reports, weather, ranching, and other information necessary for those who live a life that is different from urban dwellers, but just as vital to American economy. Please support rural programming.
