

7521798023.txt

Large ISPs have effectively become localized monopolies, and they should be treated as such. Putting them under the so-called "Title II" approach, gives the FCC strong regulatory powers. Allowing more than one large ISP to service the same market area would increase competition and better pricing for the consumer. Doing so would decrease the kickbacks local governments get for protecting the monopoly.