

7521804853.txt

Your customer service already is abhorrent and your perennial price increases, typically performed sans notification, have made your existing companies, Comcast and Time Warner, respectively, the worst options for those who seek access to cable channels. Merging would only aggravate these realities, your monopoly, and stranglehold over your existing and future customers who lack choice when seeking industry providers.