

Regarding the TW/Comcast Merger

To whom it may concern:

It is my firmly held belief that merging two monopolies violates any sort of anti-trust laws this country has. I have personally received service from Comcast that is frighteningly shoddy, whether on the telephone or at the hands of reps I have personally come into contact with in my home.

I have been accused of not returning equipment I didn't have. For a while, there were billing shenanigans on my account. I was a frustrated victim of throttling with streaming services. I am stuck with television service that I no longer intend to use, but still have to pay for.

So it is with great trepidation that I look upon the Time Warner and Comcast merger. They have not proven to be reliable companies in the past (as current internet videos will tell you) and should they be able to monopolize further, they have no incentive whatsoever to increase the rate at which their customers have happy experiences.

I implore you as a voter, as a consumer, and as someone who would prefer to keep using these services, please stop this merger.

Thank you for listening,
Amy Renaud
