The merger of AT&T and Direct TV will again limit the choices that the public has and cause prices to increase. The rural channels should be kept on the air. If you eliminate these channels such as RFDTV it eliminates the connection we have with the rural lifestyle, not all of us live in large cities, we live in southern Ca. but we still live in a rural area and appreciate the shows on RFDTV, we have horses and goats here and so do a lot of the people in this area and their shows give us the connection to interests that we have that other channels don't have. So we do not support the mergers of these networks and the loss of our rural channels.
