

Dear Chairman Wheeler:

As a growing web-based company, we write in support of the Comcast-Time Warner Cable deal. In 2012, we founded Maker's Row with the goal of making the manufacturing process simple to understand and easy to access. Through our website, www.makersrow.com, anyone with a design idea or concept can search for a factory in the relevant industry, learn about its offerings, and then work with it to mass produce the design.

As a start-up, every individual and organization that you partner with is a critical decision. Comcast Ventures' Catalyst Fund is focused on investing in early-stage technology start-ups led by entrepreneurs of color. With the Catalyst Fund, we knew from the get-go that we'd found an investor who shared our passion and commitment for new business models using the power of the web. From the early stages of our company's development, the Comcast Ventures team dedicated meaningful time, resources, and guidance towards the future of Maker's Row.

We write in support of this deal because we believe this transaction will produce benefits for us and other innovative web-based companies. Combined with Time Warner Cable, Comcast will have added scale to innovate further in the broadband services market and all the other related technologies, making the company a key platform for online start-ups like us for years to come. That is why you should approve this transaction.

Sincerely,

Matthew Burnett
