As a rancher, my interests center around the price of cattle, and innovative ideas for raising cattle. The entertainment I like best is watching rodeos and country music shows. I find all I need to know on my favorite TV channel, RFD-TV.

I would like to know that RFD will always be available to provide the information and entertainment for folks who are farmers and ranchers like me. A large section of the United States is made up of people who live in rural areas. To ignore the millions of us who depend on RFD would be losing a lot of potential advertisement that appeals only to farmers and ranchers. If the merger of AT&T and DirecTV means the loss of RFD then I am against the merger. Please see that RFD stays on the air.

Thanks,
Zeek Henry
