Several things come to mind as I consider this issue. First of all, RFDTV is really important to most of us since it gives us more than farm information. Horses are important to people whether or not they're city dwellers or not. Great programs, teaching everything about horses are included as well as cooking, sewing, the American rodeo program, interesting programs about various states farmers markets. You can learn a great deal with these channels.

Is ATT going to allow those people who wish to cancel their contract and go to a company that does offer RFDTV without penalties?

I currently am with a company that offers RFDTV and a companion station, but I would consider breaking the contract right now if I were with these companies.

Thank you,
