It is important that large content providers and wealthy media companies don't have an advantage over smaller companies and internet startups when it comes to providing content. Internet access should be the same for everyone, all the time. Once monopolistic companies have control over the internet, the power shifts from the consumer and the public to the wealth-holders and we become no better than countries that control what their citizens can access on the internet. We, the public and the citizens being "represented" by our elected officials, don't want pay-to-play internet!
