

7521825529.txt

We are a single stand-alone FM station. We have a very small staff and limited budget. The burden of having to keep both a hard copy public file and an online public file would be very difficult for us.

I believe that religious formatted radio stations should, in particular, be exempt from this rule. With so many organizations actively seeking to attack religious organizations, the exposure on the world wide web would be potentially harmful to the station.

There are many organizations that seem to be looking feverishly to find Christian ministries and causes that they can protest against. This could open the door for expensive and time consuming litigation and potentially destroy a small operation such as ours.