

7521826201.txt

Maintaining the open Internet is vital to the free exchange of ideas and unfettered communication that is the fundamental cornerstone of a democratic society. We have already seen the near demise of independent mass media as multinational communications companies have taken control of newspapers, radio, and television. We cannot allow the Internet to be similarly bought and sold.