I am for net neutrality, and hope that those able to make decisions of this magnitude are for it as well. Everyone should pay the same amount for web services and a tiered service for a select few is a terrible idea, bankrupt of consumer consideration and protection. No company on Earth has the right to discriminate against other people or companies based on their whims and financial wishes. This idea is the antithesis of a free internet which is the very foundation upon which the internet has been able to grow, evolve and thrive for the past few decades. No company on Earth should be allowed to decide which content is more or less relevant to them or to their customers. That is for the consumer to decide. This is not the direction we should be heading in. I hope that you understand why...

Internet start-ups should have the same opportunities succeed as their now multi-billion dollar competitors. Innovation would suffer, as well as the end user experience. It would not be an experience I would like to take part in at all.

I am for protecting net neutrality and appreciate you taking my voice into account.

Thank you.
