Please reclassify broadband internet as a telecommunications service. As a conscious consumer, I can only see the idea of "tiered internet" as the gateway to higher prices and Americans being bullied further by large corporations who wish to control our access to information. I have watched the internet evolve, in the last several years, into the amazing source of information and access that it is today. People are capable of promoting art, music, culture and a free flow of ideas in ways that have never been possible before and I find it astounding, and quite frankly, disgusting that the idea of controlling this free flow of knowledge based on the ability to pay, is even in discussion. I am disappointed in our government for allowing large corporations to buy the opinions of politicians and purchase their way into positions of control. This needs to end before we lose all control of this vast and innovative portal of information and in return are handed a monopolized profit machine. By then it will be too late to undo the damage.
