Spending my hard earned money on the already inflated cost of home internet, I find it unethical that they would limit the speeds at which I can access what I want on the internet. The whole idea that they want to receive a payment from me to have certain speeds, and then are going to limit the speeds of certain sites so that they can get paid twice for the service is very aggravating. Not to mention the fact that it will limit the ability of smaller companies and start up companies to have the same quality internet as those companies with the money to pay the fees.
