

7521828916.txt

It would seem that the only opponents of net neutrality are the service providers that would benefit economically from creating fast lanes. Every other individual and business in America benefits from an open internet in which ISPs are prohibited from creating fast lanes that would result in blocked content and degraded network performance. What the correct course of action should be is not remotely debatable.