The internet has once been a staple of our advancing society and should always be. Do not limit the poor from their only source to rest of the world, to their only source to the rest of society. People will not stand for a rule imposed from greed with no righteous standing point political or otherwise. Politics are one thing however, when you disturb the boundaries of the internet (of our future) you disturb and limit the boundaries of our most talented and skilled minds. If you impose a law like this to pass then the people that make a living, the enthusiasts, the hackers, the everyday tech savvy teens will all stand up and fight back. They will stop directing their skills and talent towards their passion of the internet and redirect to find out how to put an end to this greed, believe me gentlemen and women this is the type of thing that can cause an uprising of a much higher caliber than a simple political change most people notice. They say a negative voice speaks louder than a positive one, well once people realize that this was an intentional greedy sabotage (which they will) there will be a lot of negative voices, talented minds, and dedicated, motivated individuals that will be facing this and many other things like it.
