The Internet is, and most definitely be classified as a telecommunications device. Even if the FCC decides to not classify the Internet as a telecommunications device, allowing the quite literal monopolization of internet service and blatant destruction of Internet user's rights is a terrible thing to do and the people suggesting doing so should stop, think, then hang their head in shame. People around the United States understand and agree that net neutrality is necessary for a good Internet. People of all ages, color, sex, etc. feel against the idea net monopolization.
