

7521868107.txt

Internet and information conglomerates already control a disproportionate share of the market, allowing them to both act as sole proprietors of content and sole sources of world information: Effectively a propaganda engine.

This merger would only exacerbate the situation. For the good of the consumer and the general public, as well as in deference to anti trust laws, this merger must not be allowed to move forward.