I am writing on behalf of many liberals in this country. As a user of the internet myself, I know that the freedom to know all and communicate with anyone is an opportunity I cherish. This opportunity can be taken away, I understand this, but I am furious as to why. America has become a socialist nation, under democratic standings, and many Americans are totally oblivious to it. We may get to vote, choose our "leader" but the question still remains how free are we? If our internet freedom is sold to huge corporations, where will that leave us? Any better off than any communist nation? I would say not, we would have to go through a virtual gate to get to the place on the World Wide Web we'd like to go. This is a turning point in our history, although we may seem like a free nation, there is no way in hell that we are. You take away our internet freedoms, and I swear to fucking god, this is the beginning of a revolution.
