

7521907464.txt

Net neutrality is important to me because I depend on the internet for a lot of my work and news and social life. The internet is the closest thing we have to an actual market place of ideas and giving someone the ability to decide which sources of information will be more popular than others by allowing them to adjust the speed with which content from those sources can be accessed is tantamount to de facto Prior Restraint.