

7521922062.txt

I think internet service providers should be classified as common carriers. More people I know have the internet than a land-line telephone, it seems pretty backwards that the less common of the two is the one classified as common.