The death of Net Neutrality would yet another indication of how corrupt the upper echelons of our country has become.

If the FCC kills Net Neutrality it will become crystal clear to the rest of the citizens of our democratic republic that what is good or best for them is secondary to what is good for the pocketbooks of the FCC Chair, the FCC Board of Directors and their bosses at the cable and telecommunications companies.

If the FCC kills Net Neutrality it will be one reason less for the citizens of this country to have any care or concern for those charged with protecting our rights and interests.

Net Neutrality represents the most level playing field that has existed in our country. To destroy that in the name of making a bigger buck for cable and telecom companies when they already have literal monopolies in their markets is the same as the FCC spitting in the face of each American, kicking them in the groin and taking whatever they happen to be carrying in their wallet - and then doing so again next month.

Stop this insanity. Forget killing Net Neutrality and actually look out for the interests of the citizens of this country for a change.
