

I think highspeed internet (and internet access in general) should be classified as a utility. But in the very least those who do have access to it must all be able to access it in the same way and at the same speed. Protect Net Neutrality.