I would greatly appreciate the protection of the vast majority of internet users right to not be forced into a virtual class system. I would also greatly appreciate it if the rights of corporations to legally extort kickbacks from other corporations, who in a shocking display of moral fortitude are finding themselves altruistically supporting the rights of the average citizen. Keep the net neutral, take advantage of this scenario, so that the next time someone speaks of the FCC, it is with reverence, instead of complaining about not being able to say one or all of the seven dirty words on prime time television. Thank you.
