Major providers like Netflix and Amazon are already fast! I can watch movies in HD without interruption. As a future (this May) physician and scientific researcher with an interest in health informatics, it's vitally important to me that the internet stays fast _everywhere_. We still haven't nearly tapped into its full potential, and giving preference to already-established major companies would be disastrous to all kinds of creativity and innovation, harming not only the US economy but the very spirit of the country.
