

7522659947.txt

From the perspective of IT Manager for a medium sized business, the proposed FCC rules would change the definition of what we currently call the "open internet". These rule changes have potential to cause significant financial hardships on small and medium businesses who currently use the internet as an open tool to market goods or services. The proposal is like converting every freeway or highway into a privatized toll road; where the end user gains zero benefit and is instead constricted to the goods and services that their internet provider is sponsored by. This will surely lead to small enterprises being shut out by bigger investors and disrupts fair competition.