Dear FCC,

My name is Maritere Berrios and I live in Bayamon, PR.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it users may have fewer options and a less diverse Internet.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because ISPs could act as the gatekeepers to their subscribers.

The Internet is a key integral part for my own wellness, not just entertainment but informative reasons that support my medical treatment. Thus, I need to know that there will not be barriers to entry, no gatekeepers for innovative ideas, services, data that I, and the general public can benefit from. If ISP subscribers have an easier time loading websites of existing or wealthier companies than allowing equal opportunity for other content, there is no way for many of us to access currently available resources.

Sincerely,

Maritere Berrios
