Dear FCC,

My name is Simone Mularkey and I live in Burbank, CA.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it ISPs could have too much power to determine my Internet experience by providing better access to some services but not others.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because new, innovative services that can't afford expensive fees for better service will be less likely to succeed.

The internet is important to me because, without it, I would not be able to connect to an communicate with an intricate, complex net of like-minded individuals - found all over the world - as easily. Together, we can create things that reach out to others on an unprecedented level, and putting any hindrance on that freedom of communication and accessibility could lead to catastrophic effects.

Sincerely,

Simone Mularkey
