Dear FCC,

My name is Jesse Theodore and I live in Cookeville, TN.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it ISPs could have too much power to determine my Internet experience by providing better access to some services but not others.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because new, innovative services that can't afford expensive fees for better service will be less likely to succeed.

Net neutrality has given a voice to content creators who otherwise never would have been heard. Companies like Facebook would never attain the level of success it has, which has become a forum not only for opinions and social communication, but advertising, free and paid.

Sincerely,

Jesse Theodore
