Dear FCC,

My name is Caleb Markle and I live in Washington, DC.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it ISPs could have too much power to determine my Internet experience by providing better access to some services but not others.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because ISP's would be able to destroy all start ups, removing the potential for entrepreneurs and economic growth.

As someone training in software engineering I understand how the removal of net neutrality would ruin the economic benefits of the internet. Also this would likely result in thousands of people with the capacity to take down government websites and cause damage to become immensely angry at the government.

Sincerely,

Caleb Markle
