Dear FCC,

My name is Phillip Charles Brown and I live in Washington DC, DC.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it ISPs could have too much power to determine my Internet experience by providing better access to some services but not others.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because new, innovative services that can't afford expensive fees for better service will be less likely to succeed.

This is quite possibly one of the most corrupt ideas up for debate. The fact that we even have to have this discussion hurts my heart. Please don't ruin one of the greatest resources we have just to make more money.

Sincerely,

Phillip Charles Brown
