Dear FCC,

My name is Trevor Stillson and I live in Las Vegas, NV.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it ISPs could have too much power to determine my Internet experience by providing better access to some services but not others.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because new, innovative services that can't afford expensive fees for better service will be less likely to succeed.

I'm part of a poor family, and one of the major things I take advantage is how even cheap internet has everything that I want, it may give it to me slower, but there is nothing stopping me from just going to Youtube/Pornhub/Facebook etc. While they may not be the most informative or productive uses of my time, I get to use them without bounds, with no one stopping me.

Sincerely,

Trevor Stillson
