Dear FCC,

My name is Noori and I live in Omaha, NE.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it users may have fewer options and a less diverse Internet.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because new, innovative services that can't afford expensive fees for better service will be less likely to succeed.

I'm a biotechnology student and my research depends on the fact that I can download and upload information in high speed internet. If ISP subscribers exclusively get access to higher speeds, this could damage my and my fellow students' dreams of a future of free and open internet.

Sincerely,

Noori
